Unexpected communications 301190

This is the first of a series of messages that will be transmitted without fixed deadlines to a variable number of receivers. Each message will be market with a number that will indicate the date of emission and may be sent out through the mail, by fax, modem or other system of communication. The message may be in colour or black & white, mono or stereo, material or immaterial, fixed or kinetic, real or virtual, interactive or not...

It will not be a daily newspaper nor a magazine because it will contain personal events and may transmitted in a single copy edition, without fixed deadlines and on a no profit basis. It will not be made available in the news-stands nor on a subscription basis, but the receivers will be chosen following subjective and variable criteria.

It will not be a private diary, because it may contain texts and images created by other people, it will contain no secrets and there will be no copyrights to be respected.

There will not be personally adressed messages as the receivers may be more than one for each message, besides the various materials that I will receive may be used wholly or partially to create new messages to be propagated.

It will be that will be, nothing more, nothing less.
